

International Trade Commission Investigation Of SK hynix Resumes

June 18, 2018

IRVINE, Calif., June 18, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- Netlist, Inc. (NASDAQ: NLST), today announced that the United States International Trade Commission (ITC) issued a schedule in its investigation of SK hynix RDIMM and LRDIMM enterprise memory products, including a claim construction order by the tentative date of August 24, 2018 and trial dates of December 17-21, 2018.

On May 29, 2018, the ITC Commissioners issued a Remand Order sending the investigation back to the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) to resolve the parties' claim construction disputes and continue the investigation.

"We look forward to receiving the Judge's order on claim construction which will make clear the issue of infringement in this case," said C.K. Hong, CEO of Netlist, "We're also pleased to see the investigation get back on track, with only a one-month delay for the trial and the Initial Determination, from the original schedule."

The investigation will then proceed through fact and expert discovery, culminating in the December trial. The schedule sets a deadline of April 5, 2019, for the ALJ to issue an Initial Determination, with a new target date of August 5, 2019, for a Final Determination from the Commission.
